With high unemployment in our Central Valley, connecting people looking for a job with people who have jobs to fill is one of the Senator's top priorities. That's why the Senator is hosting more than 80 local employers with immediate openings at his Job Fair. Many job opportunities do not require college degrees and include vocational careers in the agriculture and oil industries, the military and military-related services, just to name a few. If you have been searching for a job, the Senator encourages you to attend.
